ferulated phytosterols) can be made using numerous processes (including various conventional cocoa oil extraction/separation methods) which do not require any or all of the steps of the Group II process (in which both phytosterols and tocopherols are extracted from ground cocoa hulls with a suitable solvent as a step therein).

The several inventions above are independent and distinct, each from the other. They have acquired a separate status in the art as a separate subject for inventive effect and require independent searches (as indicated by the different classification). The search for each of the above inventions is not co-extensive particularly with regard to the literature search. Further, a reference which would anticipate the invention of one group would not necessarily anticipate or even make obvious another group. Finally, the consideration for patentability is different in each case. Thus, it would be an undue burden to examine all of the above inventions in one application.

Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and the search required for each Group is not necessarily required for the other Groups, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.
